

Reparations to Indigenous People of North America

Voluntary Wealth Inequality Calculation Method:

The suggested giving level is 1% of combined total earned and unearned income. The United States, Internal Revenue Service Form 1040 lists total income on line 9. The Canada Revenue Agency T-1 form lists total income on line 15000.

The indigenous people of North America have endured many barriers for building the current cultural definition of wealth including but not limited to lack of education opportunity, discriminatory hiring practices, discriminatory business loan practices and confiscation of land based natural resources (timber, coal, uranium, oil, etc.).

An income based voluntary wealth inequality donation is a giving option for those who do not own property.

Each income taxpayer's few dollars will be contributions given with a generous heart seeking justice. Many income taxpayers paying a voluntary wealth inequality tax could add up to significant reparations over time.

Where to send your wealth inequality giving:

You may wish to send your payment to an organization dedicated to providing wealth building opportunities. Education, trauma recovery, and trades training organization might best fit your wishes.

You might wish to pay the descendants of the people who once nurtured the land where you now live. You can use an online search tool to learn the name(s) of the tribes in your area.

Some simple steps:

- Identify the indigenous people of the land you wish to acknowledge.
- Find an organization link on this webpage specific to the tribe or confederation.
- If you do not find a link, you can research about the tribe or confederacy that you wish to benefit from your land acknowledgement giving.
- Consider sending an invitation to post a link to that benefit organization on the Giving Gateway.

Once you have determined how much you wish to give, click on a beneficiary organization to give directly. Beneficiary organizations are only posted with their consent. Eugene Friends Meeting does not collect any funds related to the Giving Gateway.
